

Inspiring Ireland, Inspiring Students

Dr. Fidelma Healy Eames, Study and Careers, is delighted to announce that the next 'Inspiring Ireland Inspiring Students' interview, in collaboration with ESCI, will be with

Samantha Power

Administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID)

on

Tuesday, February 1st @ 10am

What drives an Irish girl with Dublin and Kerry roots, born and raised in Ireland to the age of 9, to be a foreign policy and human rights' advisor to former US President Barack Obama and become the US Ambassador to the UN? Such is the amazing story of Administrator Samantha Power now serving in the Biden administration! But that is only part of her story. Samantha is mother to two young children Declan (13) and Rian (9), a Harvard professor, a Pulitzer-winning author and at her core is a human rights' activist. Inspiring indeed!

If you or your students want to participate - forward your questions to fidelma@studyandcareers.ie or to twitter @educate_talent by January 24th.

Together we will learn how an Irish woman can make such a massive contribution on the world stage".

Book here or via ESCI and your local Education Support Centre.

@educate_talent @ESCItweets.